Moonshine And Guns Prove Costly

Four Men With Drawn Guns Force Henry Yunker of Mokena to Hitch Up Horse and Pull Auto out of Mud

About 8:30 a. m., Sunday there was a knock at the door of the farm home of Henry Yunker northeast of Mokena, and when Mrs. Yunker went to the door she saw two men standing there. One of them told her that their car had become stalled in a mud hole in the highway along side the barn on the Yunker farm and he wanted to know what it would cost them to be pulled out and when Mrs. Yunker told him the usual price was about $2 he said "you will, will you" and then flashed a gun on Mrs. Yunker. The latter was home alone with the exception of her son Walter. He went out to the barn to get the team ready. In the meantime Mrs. Yunker got busy on the telephone and called the Mokena central who at once located Mr. Yunker at the barbershop and told him what had taken place at his home and he at once got in his car and drove home.

Pull Gun on Mr. Yunker
When Mr. Yunker entered the yard he saw the men standing there and he asked who pulled a gun on his wife. They pretended that one of their number was drunk and did it. Suddenly three guns, one a sawed off shot gun, were pointed at Mr. Yunker and he was told to hurry and hitch his team to the auto and pull it out of the mud, which he did.

In the meantime Emil Cappel and Louis Lauffer came along and they too were covered with the guns and told to stay aside. Mr. Cappel had attempted to go in the house to call the sheriff, but he was ordered back to the roadside at the point of a gun. After Mr. Yunker had pulled the mired car out on the hard part of the road, the ring leader of the quartet of ruffians offered him a $5 bill declaring however they would get it back again.

Deputy Frisch on the Job
In the meantime Deputy John Frisch of Mokena was notified. He and Hugh Deadmore hurried out to the scene in the latter's car and as they got opposite the Hentsch farm they saw a car coming toward them heading for Mokena, so they drew aside the road and let the car pass. They saw that the car did not have a license plate so they surmised it was the crowd that had been doing the holdup stunt and they immediately gave chase. They were joined by Elmer Cooper and others.

Take up Exciting Chase
Mrs. Deadmore, local telephone manager called Deputy Henry Craven at New Lenox and told him what had happened and asked him to head off the car at New Lenox, no effort was made to stop their flight thru New Lenox. They drove up to the Corp store corner and then turned west and then north onto the Lincoln highway. Mr. Deadmore and Deputy Frisch were only a short distance away from the fleeing car when a hind wheel on Mr. Deadmore's car broke when he had to make a sharp turn at the Pease corner. Deputy Frisch was picked up by Elmer Cooper and the chase continued.

Caught at Joliet
The sheriff's office and the Joliet police had been notified and they watched the streets leading into the city and caught the fleeing quartet at the corner of Washington and Logan streets. The men were at once taken to the county jail.

They had thrown away a revolver and a cartridge belt with cartridges but they were found long side the road.

Assessed Heavy Fine
On Monday the men who gave their names as Gordon Anderson, Harold Caldwell, George Stott and William Burke, all of Joliet, were arraigned before Justice of the peace Alex McCowan and the first two men, Anderson and Caldwell were assessed a fine of $200 and costs each for disorderly conduct and the other two were fined $50 and costs each on the same charge. The fines were paid and the quartet was released.

It is said they were associated with bootleggers and had friends in that crowd who furnished the money it is thought, to pay the fines.

This crowd of hoodlums was well filled up with moonshine and were on their way from an all night carousal and got the idea that they were real tough guys and could enforce their wishes with a big display of guns, but they were badly mistaken. It is too bad that they did not get a more severe punishment than a fine.

Credit Due Operator
Much credit is due to Mrs. Deadmore the Mokena telephone manager for her efficient service in notifying the Joliet authorities, for if they had not been so well posted as to the route taken by the fleeing men they might have escaped capture.

Orland Election Regular Landslide

The Orland Township election held Tuesday was a live affair, from start to finish.

Eleven candidates participated in the race for the various township offices and the majority of them were on the move from start to finish, encouraging the voters to get out to the polls and vote for their favorite candidates. And of course each candidate tried his best to convey the impression that he would have no objection to being the one so favored.

Some preliminary electioneering had also been done by the candidates, previous to election day, cigars had been freely distributed among the men, and a limited quantity of gum for the ladies, and last, but not least, a few 'tea parties' had been given by some of the candidates, but these failed to produce the desired results that their sponsors intended they should. The results of the campaign was the largest vote on record for the township. A total of 460 votes being cast for the various candidates in spite of the extremely unfavorable conditions of the roads, the voters showed their enthusiasm by coming to the polls in various ways. Sleds, wagons, buggies, carts and automobiles were brought into service and those that did not come in this manner, walked.

Contrary to some elections a general good feeling prevailed among the candidates during the election, the results of which is as follows:

For supervisor- Chas. Doctor re-elected with 356 votes.

For township clerk-Joseph Creer with 250 votes, his opponent B. F. Sippel received 207 votes.

For assessor- Martin Smith re-elected with 267 votes, his opponent for office Fred H. Arnold, received 180 votes.

For collector- Albert Habenicht with 163 votes and his opponents for office were Fred Yunker, 161 votes and John Bormet 129 votes.

For highway commissioner Wm. T. Beagley re-elected to office by 283 votes, his opponent for this office was William Kollman who received 169 votes.

John Sayers received 211 votes for school trustee no opposition.

The main bone of contention appeared to be the office of town collector and the vote cast for same, shows that the candidates for the office were all good canvassers for votes, as all the votes cast for this office were quite evenly distributed.

ORLAND HAS MANY

VILLAGE OFFICE SEEKERS

The political situation in Orland is in a tangle. Rumors flying thick and fast. So many men have been mentioned as candidates for aldermen that hardly any non-office seeking voters are left. Last Friday Rumor had it that Ike Cleveland and W. Schussler, Jr., and A. Waje were on one ticket. Mr. Waje says it is news to him. John Helenhouse was supposed to be running, but has decided to be undecided. Geo. Yunker, Herm DeWeese, Ernest Vogt and Phil Steffin are on one ticket. Phil Steffin as Village clerk and the others as trustees. Well, lets hope the cigars are good and enough to go around.

ORLAND STREETS COMPARED TO SHELL TORN BATTLE FIELDS; IMPASSABLE

Orland streets can be compared to shell ridden battlefields of Europe. Not one street can be found where the old Tin Can will not go to axle in mud. The stone roads have given place to foot deep ruts. The village will have to spend quite a bit of money for improving grading and graveling the roads.

Krapp and Warning Defeated In Frankfort Election

The various candidates for the town offices had been busy for several weeks stumping the township and a record breaking crowd turned out at the polling places in Frankfort and Mokena. Every voter that it was possible to get out was induced to cast their ballot. The ladies turned out in force and their was much excitement.

John Clarke Wins

At Bremen Polls

The town of Bremen town election on Tuesday contained a number of April fool surprises for the candidates and drew out a record vote in the five precincts in the township. Every voter that it was possible to get out were at the polls to cast their votes.

The chief fight was waged for town clerk and highway commissioner, resulting in the defeat of Chas. Nielsen, who has been town clerk and of John Bettenhausen and Herman Siemsen for highway commissioner. Those elected are as follows:

Fulton, 831 votes; Frank Mech, Jr., 513 votes; for highway commissioner, John M. Bettenhausen, 563 votes; Herman Siemsen, 274 votes; John Clark, 818 votes; for school trustee A. O. Foskett, 1200 votes.

At the town board of auditors meeting held at the Tinley Park village hall the Canada thistle matter created much discussion. Some of the farmers stated that it was useless to cut the weed if only one or two farmers would cut and the rest would let the weed go to seed.

WILL COUNTY SENT CONGRESSMAN TO WASHINGTON ONLY 12 YEARS OUT OF 108 YEARS

Will County is 108 years old and during all this long expanse of time she has only been represented in congress by a Will County congressman for 12 years, just think of that while on the other hand Aurora has been monopolizing the office by sending a congressman to Washington 80 years out of 38 years.

Why hog a good thing? Pass it around. Will County should by all means have the chance to send one of her sons to congress and the only way this can be done is by a real solid vote for D. R. Anderson, Will County's choice for the office of congressman. Remember next Tuesday is the important primary election day so let us all turn out and vote. Your ballot is no good to you or any one else unless you vote it and put it in the ballot box. Put Will County over the top by nominating and electing D. R. Anderson.

Frankfort School Bond Issue Wins

The special school election held at Frankfort Saturday for the purpose of voting on the issuance of a bond issue of $23,500 for building a new school, and the issue was carried by 103 votes. The vote stood 193 votes in favor of the bond issue and 90 against. A few weeks ago the bond issue was voted down, but the proposition of building a new school carried by a handsome majority.

VOTERS DON'T LET HART'S BONUS, BEER AND BUNK FOOL YOU NEXT TUESDAY

How many voters who heard Mr. Hart, the out and out wet candidate for congress from Aurora, promise to bring beer back if he is elected, realize that it would take a lot more than himself to bring this about? It must be remembered that there are many more congressmen who would have something to say beside Mr. Hart on the question.

The Hart platform is not to be thought of and it is a disgrace to link the soldiers bonus proposition with beer which is outlawed under the 18th amendment. In fact the whole matter is only kicking up a lot of dust which blinds many an unthinking voter and even befuddles the issue for the more conservative voter. Bonus and beer is bunk and the whole matter should be looked at in the light of a grand stand play for the purpose of getting the ex-service men's and the bootleg element votes. Be wise and do not let Hart fool you with his "Bonus, Beer and Bunk." Why try to instill more disrespect for law instead of encouraging the enforcement of it?

Steven Nemeth the well known auctioneer of Orland and Mr. Matter a widely known auctioneer of Plainfield cried the sale. Cattle averaged from $100 to $220 a head. The horses and farm tools brought excellent prices. The sale netted $8,000. The only disappointing feature was the withdrawing of the furniture from the sale. In the morning just before the sale began, the auctioneers got word to withhold the furniture from the sale. Many women came from many miles around with a view of buying some of the furniture, and were much disappointed when the order came withholding the furniture from sale. It is understood that the furniture may be sold later at a special sale.

WEASEL'S WHITE COAT

ONCE upon a time when the Weasel was not as cruel as he is now, there lived a Young Weasel in that part of the country where the snow comes early and does not go away until springtime.

Young Weasel had a very hard time of it in the long winters trying to get food or even run over the snow in the sun, because his chocolate-brown coat could easily be seen by his enemies.

his troubles and, if he could, think of a way to make his life easier.

"Now if I had a white coat to go with my white vest," thought Young Weasel, "I could run over the snow without being seen. But how am I to find one?"

His question was answered sooner than he expected, for at that moment Young Weasel saw a queer dwarf-like creature run out of a cave chasing four rats.

"You will eat all of my beautiful colors, will you?" screamed the Dwarf. "I'll find a way to be rid of you pests if I have to borrow an old witch's Lian cat to catch you."

"Colors," thought Young Weasel. "Perhaps he can find a way to give me a white coat if I chase away the rats for him."

JOHN TORTIS

THERE was sharp competition among various contractors throughout the state for the building of the new memorial hall in the capital. The memorial committee had held meetings every day for a week, hearing bids, comparing estimates, investigating credentials, until there were only two principal candidates left. The committee were the solid citizens of the community, and they had honestly at heart the significance and beauty and usefulness of the new hall.

Mr. James Hare was talking. "Gentlemen, believe me, if that hall isn't finished before winter, and if it isn't one of the sights to make the old state proud, my name isn't James Hare, that's all! Trouble getting labor? That's all crazy Bolshevik talk. You give me this contract, and I'll start work tomorrow—that's what. Trust me, gentlemen, I know what I'm talking about. You want a real handsome memorial: this is no time to hem and haw. Well, I propose to put you up something that'll make the whole country sit up and take notice."

Mr. James Hare mopped his heated brow violently and then, handkerchief in hand, began to gesticulate wildly in the enthusiasm of his oratory. Presently he went out, leaving the table heaped up with plans and blue prints; and, almost before the committee were aware, a quiet gentleman was ushered into the room. It was John Tortis, who had worked his way up from bottom to top in the firm he represented.

What were the ideas of the committee about the memorial, was what John Tortis wanted to know. Before they knew it the committee were speaking at length, one after another. Meanwhile Mr. John Tortis simply put in a word here and there that served to bring out more information from the older men. It was only at the very end of the interview that in a few concise sentences he made his proposition in definite terms, with no promises.

When the fathers of the city were once more alone together they sat in silence for a moment. Then the chairman said: "I am reminded of an old saying of my father's. He taught us when we were children that there is a reason for all things and that the good Lord has given us two eyes and two ears and only one mouth for a purpose. Gentlemen, my trust is in the man whose habit it is to use his eyes and ears twice where he uses his mouth once."

After running a little way the Dwarf came waddling back to his cave, and Young Weasel ran nimbly up to him and said: "If you please, sir, I can help you to be rid of the rats. You need not get the black cat. I am very spry and nimble; watch me jump."

Young Weasel leaped into the air, then he ran like a streak of light under the bushes and, while the Dwarf was peeking from under the black hood which he wore over his head to see where he had gone, Young Weasel appeared again at his side.

"You are a quick one," said the Dwarf, pulling his long black cape over his humped shoulders and back. "I believe you can catch those rascals and I will pay you well if you will rid me of their visits, for they are spoiling my work. Soon I shall not have enough colors left to make the trees beautiful in the fall."

It did not take Young Weasel long to prove to the Dwarf that he had not promised something he could not do, for as soon as the rats discovered he was living in the Dwarf's cave, as some of them did to their sorrow, all the others ran off to another part of the country and never came back.

"As soon as the Dwarf was satisfied he was rid of his enemies for good he asked Young Weasel what he could do to repay him for his good work.

"Give me a white coat to wear with my white vest in the winter time," said Young Weasel. "Then I can run over the snow without being seen so easily by my enemies."

It took some time before the Dwarf could make the brown coat white but FRANCE is responsible for the dashing little name Annette, which conjures up visions of a slim, chic creature of flashing eyes and saucy smile. The very sound of the name seems to preclude any relationship with demure Anne, but they have a common origin in the Hebrew word meaning "grace", which the Irish have identified with their native Aine (joy).

The name from which Annette was evolved was first used in France after a supposed appearance of the good St. Anne to two children at Auray in Brittany, and first gained vogue as a feminine name through the Bretonne heiress, twice queen of France. Its popularity in court circles insured its widespread usage among all classes in France.

Scotland adopted it in preference to the English Anne, calling it Annot. It penetrated England without change of form and, curiously enough, in view of Anglo-Saxon distaste for Gallic names, maintained its original form. Hence, in this country, it is bestowed without reference to its foreign flavor, and is almost never used as a derivative of Anne.

The yellow jacinth is Annette's talismanic gem. It will protect her against lightning and insure her safety in traveling. At the approach of danger or disease it is said to pale in color. Saturday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

DADDY LONGLEGS

HERE are some of the superstitions common in the United States and Canada regarding that spider-like creature generally known as "daddy longlegs." Take him by one leg and say: "Daddy longlegs, tell me where my cows are." He will point in the direction of the cattle with one of his other legs. Wish on a daddy longlegs "for luck." Daddy longlegs brings good luck. It is bad luck to kill him. Say: "Tell me where my love is," and he will point in the required direction. Daddy longlegs gets his reputation from the fact that he is an arachnid; the name being from a Greek word meaning spider and used to designate the class to which both the true spider and daddy longlegs belong. To all intents and purposes daddy longlegs is a spider and a field spider at that, associated with the harvest so that he and his near relations have, for long centuries, been known as "harvestmen" when not spoken of under a more fanciful name. In England he is "harvestman," or "harvest spider," the name daddy longlegs being applied to the crane fly there.

All spiders, according to Pliny, were much regarded by the Romans for purposes of divination and it was considered bad luck to kill one. Daddy longlegs being a field spider, intimately connected with husbandry, is naturally the proper sort of spider to divine with in such a matter as finding the cows. While all over the country daddy longlegs is used to find the cows, it is in a few places only that he is employed to find where one's love is. Such use of him is outside his special function and is merely a remnant of the general use of the spider in divination among the Romans.

Famous Greek Inventor

To the Greek Anaximander of Miletus is attributed the invention of the first navigation instruments. The following account is given: "Mariners had observed that the farther north they went the higher the Pole star rose in the heavens, and Anaximander is reputed to have invented an arrangement of two sticks hinged together, so that when one was held horizontally and the other pointed to the Pole star, the angle they made would indicate how far north the observer was."

SLASH OF 1923 TAXES ASSURED

Senate Committee Approves
25 Per Cent Reduction Unanimously.

Washington.—The senate finance committee voted radical action on the tax reduction bill passed by the house. Of first interest to the general public was the approval of the house provision giving a retroactive reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on 1923 income paid in 1924. The vote was unanimous, including both Democrats and Republicans in the committee.

The senate is certain to approve this reduction. Under the program the taxpayer will pay one-half of the next installment, due June 15, and three-fourths of each of the last two installments. If the tax has been paid in full a refund of one-fourth will be made the taxpayers.

Other action taken by the committee in the night session included:

Increased the tax on corporation earnings from 12½ to 14 per cent.

Repealed the tax of $1 per $1,000 on capital stock of corporations, the increase in the tax on earnings being in lieu of this tax.

Adopted an amendment providing for the taxation of income from state and municipal securities issued hereafter, the purpose being to carry the question of the constitutionality of such a tax into the courts.

Rejected the Smoot sales tax.

Rejected an amendment providing for a graduated tax on corporation earnings.

Rejected an amendment providing for full publicity of all proceedings when tax cases are carried to the board of tax appeals.

The committee also modified the house amendment opening tax returns to inspection by certain congressional committees. The house provision giving the privilege to special congressional committees was changed to include only standing or select committees of either house of congress when authorized by a resolution. This is along the lines recently suggested by President Coolidge.

Harry Sinclair to Be Tried for Senate Defy

Washington.—Charged with contempt of the senate of the United States by violating Section 102 of the revised statutes in refusing to answer questions of the public lands committee, Harry P. Sinclair, millionaire oil man and lessee of Teapot Dome was indicted by the grand jury here. The indictment is looked on here as the prelude to a "great legal controversy" which involves the question of the powers of committees of congress in exacting evidence from witnesses. It is taken for granted that this controversy will be fought through the Supreme court of the United States and will not be decided finally for a year or more.

Bank Robber Slain, Pal Shot, $12,000 Retaken

Los Angeles, Cal.—One bank robber was slain and his companion crippled by gunshot wounds and $12,000 in cash taken from the Security Trust and Savings bank was recovered during two revolver fights and a long chase. One of the robbers was fatally shot by a civilian who saw the two men commander an automobile truck and force the driver to speed them away. The second robber was shot and captured at Huntington Park, near here, by a deputy sheriff. From him the loot of the bank was recovered.

Says Berlin Can Pay $625,000,000 a Year

Paris.—Germany will be able to pay 2,500,000,000 gold marks ($625,000,000) annually about five years hence, according to the final figures which the Dawes experts' committee adopted in the report which they will submit to the reparations commission at the end of the week. The report will point out that the German annuities must vary in accordance with the general economic conditions of the world, being affected by the situation at home and abroad.

1 Killed, 2 Dying and 5 Others Wounded in Feud

Booneville, Ark.—Wilmoth Van Allen, three, is dead and Sam McCarron and Mrs. Charles Van Allen are dying here as the result of a feud between the Van Allen and McCarron families. A pitched battle was fought following a quarrel at school. The women of both families took part in the battle. Others wounded included Mrs. Sam McCarron, Mae McCarron, Ben McCarron, Roby Van Allen and Charles Van Allen.

"A THOUSAN' POUNDS"

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1788, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love. On reaching Fort Stanwix, Colonel Hare says both are too young to marry. The Hare family sail for England, and the Irons family move to Albany. Unrest grows in the colonies because of the oppressive measures of the English government. Solomon and Jack visit Boston. In November, 1770, Jack goes to Philadelphia and works in Benjamin Franklin's printing plant. Nearly three years later Margaret writes him from London, reminding him that her youth is passing and saying she has appealed to Doctor Franklin.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

This letter went to the heart of the young man. She had deftly set before him the gross unfairness of delay. He felt it. Ever since the parting he had been eager to go, but his father was not a rich man and the family was large. His own salary had been little more than was needed for clothing and books. That autumn it had been doubled and the editor had assured him that higher pay would be forthcoming. He hesitated to tell the girl how little he earned and how small, when measured in money, his progress had seemed to be. He was in despair when his friend Solomon Binkus arrived from Virginia. For two years the latter had been looking after the interests of Major Washington out in the Ohio river country. They dined together that evening at the Crooked Billet and Solomon told him of his adventures in the West and frontier stories of the notorious one-legged robber, Micah Harpe, and his den on the shore of the Ohio and of the cunning of the outlaw in evading capture.

Solomon read the girl's letter and said:

"If I was you I'd swim the big pond if necessary. This 'ere is a real simon pure, four-masted wome'n an' she wants you fer captain. As the feller said when he seen a black fox, 'Come on, boys, it's time fer to wear out yer boots.'"

"I'm tied to my job."

"Then break yer halter," said Solomon.

"I haven't money enough to get married and keep a wife."

"What an ignorant cuss you be!" Solomon exclaimed. "You don't 'pear to know when ye're well off."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that ye're wuth at least a thousan' pounds cash money."

"I would not ask my father for help and I have only forty pounds in the bank," Jack answered.

Solomon took out his wallet and removed from it a worn and soiled piece of paper and studied the memoranda it contained. Then he did some ciphering with a piece of lead. In a moment he said:

"You have got a thousan' an' fifteen pounds an' six shillin' fer to do with as ye please an' no questions asked—nary one."

"You mean you've got it?"

"Which means that Jack Irons owns it hide, horns an' taller."

Tears came to the boy's eyes. He looked down for a moment without speaking. "Thank you, Solomon," he said presently. "I can't use your money. It wouldn't be right."

Solomon shut one eye an' squinted with the other as if he were taking aim along the top of a gun barrel. Then he shook his head and drawled:

"Cat's blood an' gunpowder! That 'ere slaps me in the face an' kicks me on the shin," Solomon answered. "I've walked an' paddled eighty mile in a day an' been stabbed an' shot at an' had to run fer my life, which it ain't no fun—you hear to me. Who do ye s'pose I done it fer but you an' my kentry? There ain't nobody o' my name an' blood on this side o' the ocean—not nobody at all. An' if I kin't work fer you, Jack, I'd just 'er about as soon quit. This 'ere money ain't no good to me 'cept fer body cover an' powder an' balls. I'd as leave drop it in the river. It bothers me. I don't need it. When I git tum I go an' hide it in the bush some-whars—jest to git it out o' my way. I been thinkin' all up the road from Virginny o' this 'ere gol demnable money an' what I were a-goin' to do with it an' use it fer a wall 'twixt him an' trouble, an' the idee hurried me erlong—honest! Kind o' made me happy. Course, if I had a wife an' children, 'twould be different, but I ain't got no one. An' now ye tell me ye don't want it, which it makes me feel lonesomer 'n a tarred Tory an' kind o' sorrowful—ayes, sir, it does."

Solomon's voice sank to a whisper.

"Forgive me," said Jack. "I didn't know you felt that way. But I'm glad you do. I'll take it on the understanding that as long as I live what I have shall also be yours."

"I've two hundred pound an' six shillin' in my pocket an' a lot more hid in the bush. It's all yours to the last round penny. I reckon it'll purty high bridge the slough. I want ye to be married respectable like a gentleman —slick duds, plenty o' cakes an' pies an' no slightin' the minister or the rum bar'l."

"Major Washington give me a letter to take to Ben Franklin on t'other side o' the ocean. Ye see ev'ry letter that's sent ercross is opened an' read afore it gits to him essen it's guarded keeful. This 'ere one, I guess, has suthin' powerful secret in it. He pays all the bills. So I'll be goin' erlong with ye on the nex' ship an' when we git thar I want to shake hands with the gal and tell her how to make ye behave."

That evening Jack went to the manager of the Gazette and asked for a six months' leave of absence.

CHAPTER IV

The Crossing.

There were curious events in the voyage of Jack and Solomon. They sailed on or about the eleventh of October, 1773. Their ship was the Snow which had arrived the week before with some fifty Irish servants, indentured for their passage. The food was of poor quality, the cooking a tax upon jaw, palate and digestion, the service unclean. When good weather came, by and by, and those who had not tasted food for days began to feel the pangs of hunger the ship was filled with a most passionate lot of pilgrims. It was then that Solomon presented the petition of the passengers to the captain.

"Cap'n, we're 'bout wore out with whale meat an' slobgollion. We're all down by the head."

"So'm I," said the captain. "This 'ere man had a good recommend an' said he could cook perfect."

"A man like that kin cook the passengers with their own heat," said Solomon. "I feel like my belly was full o' rocks. If you'll let me into the galley, I'll right ye up an' shift the way o' the wind an' the course o' the ship. I'll swing the bow toward heaven 'stead o' hell an' keep her p'inted straight an' it won't cost ye a penny. They's too much swearin' on this 'ere ship. Can't nobody be a Christian with his guts a-b'ilin'. His tongue'll break loose an' make his soul look like a waggin with a smashed wheel an' a bu'sted ex. A cook could do more good here than a minister."

"Can you cook?"

"You try me an' I'll agree to happy ye up so ye won't know yerself. Yer meat won't be raw ner petrified an' there won't be no insecs in the biscuit."

So Solomon was installed as cook and happiness returned to the ship.

In the course of the voyage they overhauled the Star, a four-masted ship bound from New York to Dover. For hours the two vessels were so close that the passengers engaged in a kind of battle. Those on the Star began it by hurling turnips at the men on the other ship who responded with a volley of apples. Solomon discerned on the deck of the stranger Captain Preston and an English officer of the name of Hawk whom he had known at Oswego and hailed them. Then said Solomon:

"It's a shipload o' Tories who've had enough of Ameriky. They's a cuss on that tub that I helped put a coat o' tar an' feathers on in the Ohio kentry. He's the one with the black pipe in his mouth. I don't know his name but they use to call him Slops—the driest, low-downest, d—n Tory traitor that ever lived. Helped the Injuns out thar in the West. See that 'ere black pipe? Allus carries it in his mouth 'cept when he's eatin'. I guess he goes to sleep with it. It's one o' the features o' his face. We tarred him plenty now you hear to me."

That evening a boat was lowered and the captain of the Snow crossed a hundred yards of quiet sea to dine with the captain of the Star in the cabin of the latter. Next day a stiff wind came out of the west.

Because he had to take off his coat while he was working in the galley, Solomon gave the precious letter into Jack's keeping.

About noon on the twenty-ninth of November they made Dover and anchored in the Downs. Deal was about three miles away and its boats came off for them. They made a circuit and sailed close in shore. Each boat that went for passengers had its own landing. Its men threw a rope across the breakers. This was quickly put on a windlass. With the rope winding on its windlass the boat was slowly hauled through the surge, its occupants being drenched and sprinkled with salt water. They made their way to the inn of the Three Kings where two men stood watching as they approached. One of them Jack recognized as the man Slops with the black pipe in his mouth.

"That's him," said the man with the black pipe, pointing at Solomon, whereupon the latter was promptly arrested.

"What have I done?" he asked.

"You'll learn directly at 'eadquarters," said the officer.

Solomon shook hands with Jack and said: "I'm glad I met ye," and turned and walked away with the two men.

Jack was tempted to follow them, but feeling a hidden purpose in Solomon's conduct went into the inn.

So the friends parted, Jack being puzzled and distressed by the swift change in the color of their affairs. The letter to Doctor Franklin was in his pocket—a lucky circumstance. He decided to go to London and deliver the letter and seek advice regarding the relief of Solomon. At the desk in the lobby of the Three Kings he learned that he must take the post chaise for Canterbury, which would not be leaving until 6 p. m. This gave him time to take counsel in behalf of his friend. Turning toward the door, he met Captain Preston, who greeted him with great warmth and wished to know where was Major Binkus.

Jack told the captain of the arrest of his friend.

"I expected it," said Preston. "So I have waited here for your ship. It's that mongrel chap on the Star who got a tarring from Binkus and his friends. He saw Binkus on your deck, as I did, and proclaimed his purpose. So I am here to do what I can to help you. I cannot forget that you two men saved my life. Are there any papers on his person which are likely to make him trouble?"

"No," said Jack, thinking of the letter lying safely in his own pocket.

"That's the important thing," Preston resumed. "Binkus is a famous scout who is known to be anti-British. Such a man coming here is supposed to be carrying papers. Between ourselves, they would arrest him on any pretext. You leave this matter in my hands. If he had no papers he'll be coming on in a day or two."

"I'd like to go with you to find him," said Jack.

"Better not," Preston answered with a smile.

"Why?"

"Because I suspect you have the papers. They'll get you, too, if they learn you are his friend. Keep away from him. Sit quietly here in the inn until the post chaise starts for Canterbury. Don't let anyone pick a quarrel with you, and remember this is all a sacred confidence between friends."

"I thank you and my heart is in every word," said Jack as he pressed the hand of the captain. "After all, friendship is a thing above politics—even the politics of these bitter days."

He sat down with a sense of relief and spent the rest of the afternoon reading the London papers, although he longed to go and look at the fortress of Deal Castle. He had tea at five and set out on the mail carriage, with his box and bag, an hour later. The road was rough and muddy, with deep holes in it. At one point the chaise rattled and bumped over a plowed field. Before dark he saw a man hanging in a gibbet by the roadside. At ten o'clock they passed the huge gate of Canterbury and drew up at an inn called the King's Head. The landlady and two waiters attended for orders. He had some supper and went to bed. Awakened at 5 a. m. by the sound of a bugle, he arose and dressed hurriedly and found the post chaise waiting. They went on the King's road from Canterbury and a mile off they came to a big, white gate in the dim light of the early morning.

A young man clapped his mouth to the window and shouted:

"Sixpence, yer honor."

It was a real turnpike and Jack stuck his head out of the window for a look at it. They stopped for breakfast at an inn far down the pike and went on through Sittingbourne, Faversham, Rochester and the lovely valley of the River Medway, of which Jack had read.

At every stop it amused him to hear the words "chaise an' pair," flying from host to waiter and waiter to hostler and back in the wink of an eye.

Jack spent the night at the Rose in Dartford and went on next morning over Gadshill and Shootershill and Blackheath. Then the Thames and Greenwich and Deptford, from which he could see the crowds and domes and towers of the big city. A little past two o'clock he rode over London bridge and was set down at the Spread Eagle, where he paid a shilling a mile for his passage and ate his dinner.

Such, in those days, was the crossing and the trip up to London, as Jack describes it in his letters.

THE KINGDOM RENT ASUNDER

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 12:1-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall."—Prov. 16:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Foolish King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rehoboam's Folly.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Division of the Kingdom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why the Kingdom Was Divided.

The kingdom so gloriously administered in David's time reached its climax in the time of Solomon. Solomon was led astray through the influence of his heathen wives, and the kingdom had begun to wane. God had expressed his indignation toward him and made known the fact that the kingdom was to be rent from him, yet not in his time, but in the time of Rehoboam (1 Kings 11:9-13).

I. The Demand of the People (vv. 1-4).

This was occasioned by the burden of excessive taxation and enforced labor, which was required by Solomon in order to build costly houses and temples for his heathen wives. Owing to the multiplicity of his wives, this became very burdensome. They promised loyalty to him on the condition of lightened burdens.

II. Rehoboam's Foolish Decision (vv. 5-15).

1. Rehoboam Consulted With the Old Men (vv. 5-7). These were men of experience who had been Solomon's advisers. They advised that the people's request be granted.

2. Rehoboam Consulted the Young Men (vv. 8-11). These young men had grown up with him, possibly were his half-brothers, sons of Solomon's many wives. Being thus brought up in the luxury of the harem, they were ignorant of the legal right of the people. Therefore, they advised even that the burdens be increased.

3. Rehoboam Followed the Advice of the Young Men (vv. 12-15). At the appointed time he announced his purpose to the people. He even answered them roughly, asserting his purpose to increase their burdens and sorrows.

III. The Revolt of the Ten Tribes (vv. 16-24).

Upon Rehoboam's announcement of his rash purpose, all Israel cried out, "What portion have we in David? . . . to your tents, O Israel."

1. Rehoboam's Attempt to Collect Tribute (vv. 18, 19). Adoram, his tribute gatherer, was stoned to death. So violent was the opposition on the part of the people that Rehoboam had to flee to Jerusalem to save his life.

2. Jeroboam Made King Over Israel (v. 20). They seemed to have lost no time in selecting a head so as to be strong in their opposition to Rehoboam.

3. Rehoboam's Attempt to Compel the Ten Tribes to Return to David (vv. 21-24). To effect this, he assembled his army of 180,000 men. Through the prophecy of Shemlah, which forbade them to go against their brethren they were persuaded to return.

IV. Jeroboam's Scheme to Unify the Ten Tribes (vv. 25-33).

1. He Established Calf Worship (vv. 25-30). His pretext for this worship was his fear lest the religious unity should heal the political separation. His fear was that the people would go back to Jerusalem to worship and therefore would gradually be led to acknowledge allegiance to Rehoboam and his own life would be taken. He was too shrewd a politician to do away with religion. He knew that religion was a powerful factor in man's life. The prevailing religion of the world today is a political one. It is used as a sort of cement to hold together people and political interests.

2. His Scheme of Worship (vv. 31-33).

(1) He built houses and high places (v. 31). This was against the direct command of God. God had directed His people to destroy the high places, to break down the idolatrous centers.

(2) He made priests of the lowest of the people (v. 31). God had set aside the tribe of Levi to fill the office of priesthood. In this again he disobeyed God.

(3) He changed the day of the Feast of the Tabernacle (v. 32). The time of this feast was set by the Lord (Lev. 23:33, 34). Jeroboam argued that the change in the time would be better suited to their northern climate, but God who made the climate ordained the time of the feast. It was his business, therefore, to obey God.

(4) Jeroboam himself intrudes into the priest's office. This act of presumption on his part was the climax of his godless acts, which all grew out of his wicked heart.

A Good Policy

For this is my maxim. I hold that the party receiving an obligation should ever remember it, the party conferring it should forget it immediately, if one is to act with honesty, the other without meanness.—Demosthenes.

Are Found Together

Propriety of thought, and propriety of diction are commonly found together. Obscurity and affectation are the two great faults of style.—Macaulay.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mother can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

Trichinosis

Trichinosis, a painful and often fatal disease, is caused by a small parasite that is sometimes present in pork. The trichina parasite is so small that it can only be seen with a microscope, and hogs harboring it show no symptoms nor does the diseased pork appear different from pork not diseased. All pork should be thoroughly cooked before eating, as that is the only sure way of ridding the meat of the disease.

Food Solids

From 100 pounds of digestible feed nutrients the dairy cow returns 18 pounds of human food solids, the hog 15.6 pounds, the steer 2.8 and the sheep 2.6 pounds.

BACK ACHY?

Lame and achy in the morning? Tortured with backache all day long? No wonder you feel worn out and discouraged! But have you given any thought to your kidneys? Weak kidneys cause just such troubles; and you are likely to have radachas, too, with dizziness, stabs of pains and bladder irregularities. Don't neglect! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's Pills have helped thousands of men, women and children.

An Illinois Case

Mrs. J. Lewis St. Diverson, Ill., says: "My kidneys got out of order and I had a dull pain in the small of my back all the time. When I stooped to do my housework I got a catch across my back that made it hard to straighten. When I did my washing I minded the trouble the most. I used Doan's Pills and they drove away the backache."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BEHIND A MASK

WITH the exception of children, who are just beginning to find their way about through a labyrinth of words of perplexing colorings, meanings and difficulties, the great majority of humans habitually hide the truth behind a carefully adjusted mask.

To our shame, be it said, we take as naturally to exaggeration as a duck takes to water, or an eagle to the naked cliffs.

Behind our mask we are guilty of every conceivable form of degrading deceit, against which the better part of us rises very often in silent protest, though it avails nothing beyond a temporary twinge of conscience.

Emotion, passion, pride and avarice are shrewdly concealed from our intimates, and we frequently chuckle to ourselves at our ability to continue the fraud without being suspected of the despicable purpose that causes it.

We puff out our character and attributes, posing as saintly beings, when we know in our hearts we are the opposite.

We like to magnify ourselves in the eyes of others, just as they seek to enlarge themselves as they strut before us, preen their fine feathers and crow in sheer vanity.

And this conceit, which is very difficult to understand in reasoning beings, is responsible for much of our unhappiness.

It is at the best a perilous weakness, sure at some time or another to strip us of our rags of dishonor in the presence of those of our friends whose good opinions we prize and wish to retain.

But under the masks our faces exhibit no concern when this thought steals suddenly upon us, though we may experience a sickening sense of humiliation when we try to look the world in the eyes.

A man or woman with a restless personal ambition is very apt to wear a mask until he or she fails to reach a cherished goal. In a burst of anger the disguise is brushed aside and we are horrified as we catch a glimpse of a terrible face we never knew.

It is only when our strength wanes, when our hands tremble and we strain our failing eyes toward the darkening west that we find courage to tear the mask from our face and reveal ourselves as we really are. It is then we tell those about us to be unashamed in the simple garb of truth as is the ingenious child.

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHT

If There Should Be

WASHINGTON.—Political conditions throughout the country at this time apparently not only warrant the veteran campaign managers of the Democratic and Republican organizations in believing the presidential elections next fall are in extreme doubt, but also in taking into consideration the possibility that there may be no direct election by the people at all. Predictions are again coming to be heard in Washington with great frequency that a third party may prevent any candidate from receiving a majority of the votes in the electoral college. And conditions within the house of representatives are such that the house may not be able to elect a president in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

In assuming that the next presidential elections might result in a no-election by direct vote of the people the political leaders are admitting at the outset that the result will be almost as close as the Hughes-Wilson contest in 1916. In a three-party contest, in the event of a close election, a few electoral votes may easily result in throwing the election of president into the house of representatives, as was the case in 1824.

In the event of a no-election at the states constituting a quorum for that purpose, but the election can only be accomplished when one candidate of the three highest on the list of candidates at the general election shall receive the votes of a majority of all the states. In other words, 25 states must cast their vote in the house for a candidate to be elected president.

Under the Constitution, if the house failed to elect a president in the event of a no-election by popular vote, the vice president of the United States would automatically become president, but at this time there is no vice president, and there are even some observers that think that the senate might fail to elect a vice president, although the choice in that body is limited to the two highest candidates.

In this case the country would find itself with an "acting president" in the person of Charles E. Hughes who would, under the Constitution, hold office until congress provides for another general election.

Bill for Great U. S. Superpower System

JUST as the house approved Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals a bill was introduced in both chambers linking up Muscle Shoals, Boulder canyon, and the Colorado river in a great public superpower system, functioning under government control, to produce and sell electricity, fertilizer and nitrates for explosives on a cost basis, and conservation and use of the nation's resources. The bill was introduced in the senate by Senator Norris (Rep., Neb.) and in the house by Representative Keller (Rep., Minn.).

Creation of a federal nonpolitical public service commission to co-operate with the various states, municipalities, districts, and other political subdivisions in the development of the system, with its members appointed by the President, subject to the approval of the senate, is contemplated under the measure.

A bond issue of $500,000,000 as a revolving fund to carry on the initial work and developments would be authorized.

Meanwhile, the "eleven existing government-owned hydroelectric power plants on the irrigation projects in the west and the government-owned projects at Muscle Shoals constitute the nucleus of a public superpower system already in hand," a statement from the office of Representative Keller declares.

"And here is a new and very vital reason why Muscle Shoals should not be allowed to slip out of the hands of the government or be bartered away," the statement continues. "It is tremendously important as one of the units in the public superpower system."

"Besides these power resources already in the government's hands there are 2,318 municipally-owned electric power plants in the United States which will fit in most advantageously as units of the public superpower system."

"The Norris-Keller bill makes it possible for the states to co-operate with each other and with the federal government to whatever extent is mutually agreeable so that the development of the system may proceed by negotiation and agreement."

Ask for Internal Revenue Investigation

MEMBERS of both houses of congress are stirred up over charges of wholesale abuses in the bureau of internal revenue, and demands for drastic reforms in the administration of the income tax laws, contained in a special report issued by the National Industrial Conference board of New York, received by senators and representatives.

The report was compiled after months of research by a committee of nationally known business men and economists, including Thomas S. Adams, professor of economics at Yale university, and expert adviser to the Treasury department. Appointment of a congressional commission to investigate the abuses is demanded.

Referring to the Mellon plan the committee points out that it "touches only in part the simplification of the income tax machinery." Other major problems remain, it is asserted, and the whole tax structure requires intensive study by a competent body.

"Dissatisfaction with our present administration of the income tax is heard on all sides," says the report. "Business firms are sometimes confronted with assessments that are many times the tax as finally determined, which often takes years, and in the meantime the threatened tax makes impossible necessary business extensions, and improvements."

Seven major recommendations for reforms were outlined by the committee.

The first demands a shakeup of the bureau and engagement of more "high grade, mature, and competent men" in place of "immature, relatively underpaid men" now engaged.

The second reveals the congestion in appeals. A board of tax appeals should be created outside the bureau to dispose of these, it is asserted.

The other demands as outlined are: "Increased power to determine and settle cases as they arise should be vested in the agent in charge of local revenue offices."

"The practice of the bureau in seeking a waiver by the taxpayer of his rights under the statutes of limitation should be discontinued."

"It is urged that the law be changed so as to allow the giving of bond and the postponement of payment until the appeal has been determined."

"Central housing of the bureau should be provided where adequate facilities will be available for having all employees under one roof and for storing all original copies."

"Many complaints have arisen in connection with the unpublished and secret rulings of the bureau of internal revenue. It is asserted that there is reason to believe that there are more than 4,000 of these rulings, only 10 per cent of which have been made known."

Army Investigates the Military Prisoners

MAJ. JAMES H. STANSFIELD, judge advocate, and Maj. Frank K. Ross, adjutant general, the two army officers appointed by Secretary of War Weeks to review the cases of World war soldier prisoners relative to clemency, have submitted a preliminary report. Release from confinement for many of the service men, especially first offenders, and adjustment in practically all cases is foreshadowed by the report, which emphasizes the value and importance of the personal interviews with the men, and the impression made upon the reviewing officers by their appearance, attitude, and invariable good conduct record. Extracts from the report follow:

"The cases of 535 military prisoners were investigated—80 at the United States penitentiary, Atlanta; 225 at the United States penitentiary, Leavenworth; 220 at the United States disciplinary barracks, Fort Leavenworth, and ten at the United States disciplinary barracks, Fort Jay, N. Y. "It was deemed advisable to interview the prisoners in civilian clothes and alone in a room with the prisoner, putting him at his ease, and keeping him until he had said all he had to say regarding himself and his case.

"From the appearances, mental attitude, conduct and employment while in confinement we were impressed in numerous cases, especially those of first offenders, with the fact that the men had learned their lessons and that further confinement would not improve their condition. They are ready to be placed on parole."

"Conferences were had with the wardens of the penitentiaries and the commandants of the disciplinary barracks about cases they considered especially deserving of clemency. There were also considered at the conferences cases in which sentences appeared to be in excess of those adjudged by civil courts for like offenses."

Another board of officers will be convened to follow the same procedure with approximately 240 military prisoners confined at McNeil Island, Wash., and Alcatraz Island, Calif.

believed and turned unto the Lord." Then the church at Jerusalem sent Barnabas as far as Antioch, who, on his arrival, saw clear evidences of the working of God's grace in the transformed lives of those who had professed faith in Christ. His message to them was largely one of exhortation. He appealed to them to "cleave unto the Lord" with full purpose of heart. Then, departing from Antioch, he went as far as Tarsus to seek Saul, and when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass that for a whole year they assembled themselves with the church and taught much people. As a result of this teaching, the disciples were called "Christians."

What is the significance of this new name? It is said to have been given by the pagans as a party name to distinguish the followers of Christ from Jews and other religious bodies. While this may be true, it is not all of the truth. The connection shows that this new name is closely linked with the labors of Paul, who, together with Barnabas, exercised a teaching ministry in the church at Antioch for a whole year, and as a result of that teaching, this new name of Christian was applied to the disciples.

The peculiar and distinguishing features of the Christian faith have been given to the church through the Apostle Paul, who is to be regarded as the divinely chosen interpreter of Christ. The commission which he received from the risen Lord at the time of his conversion, confirms this fact. "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things which I will appear unto thee."—Acts 26:16. These appearances were of frequent occurrence and the witness of the apostle was based on the revelations of truth made to him by the risen Lord. Concerning his message, he asserted that it was not received from man, nor taught to him by man, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ (Gal. 1:11, 12). In another place he declares, "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ."—Eph. 3:8.

These unsearchable riches, entered into by the way of faith, give significance to the name Christian. A Christian is not one who has simply turned to God and joined a church. He is one who has been born from above and united to the risen Lord in a union that is vital and eternal. This gives to a Christian a position which finds repeated expression in the phrase "in Christ," or, "in the Lord," and may be regarded as the distinguishing mark of a Christian. He is more than a believer, or a disciple, or a follower of Jesus. He is one who is "in Christ Jesus," and by virtue of this, occupies a special and unique position before God. The complement of this is that Christ dwells in the believer. He is en-Christed. This transcendent spiritual truth is referred to by the apostle in Colossians 1:26, 27, where we read of a mystery hidden from ages and generations past, but now made manifest to God's people. This mystery which is now a matter of revelation, and which it is the desire of God that every one should know, is "Christ in you, the hope of glory."

These were the truths that Paul emphasized all through his ministry. They transcend in spiritual value and transforming power every other revelation from God. They mark in a peculiar way this present dispensation of grace, during which time sinners who believe in Christ unto salvation, are united to Christ in death and resurrection and indwelt by Christ through the power of His risen life, and hence bear upon them the name of Christ. As a woman in marriage takes the name of the husband upon herself, and does things in his name, so does a believer take upon himself the name of Christ, and is exhorted to do all things in that name.

This truth grips the hidden life of prayer and purpose. Christians pray "in His name," its authority, its value, its virtue. We purpose to exalt His name, rather than to make a name for ourselves in this world. Then, in practical ways, this hidden life is manifested in giving, in going, in serving, in suffering. Thus the apostolic counsel and command to glorify God in this name, the name of Christian, is fulfilled. (See 1 Peter 4:16, R. V.).

Paper Film Invented

A recent British invention, which may completely revolutionize the film industry, enables paper films to be projected on the screen by means of reflection from light placed in front of the reels, not behind them, as at present. These new paper films are said to possess many advantages over the ordinary celluloid kind. They are non-inflammable, they do not crack or tear, and last considerably longer than celluloid. They can also be made very cheaply, and may be sent through the mails in ordinary paper wrappers.

Sardinia Becomes Modern

For years and years the native costumes of the people who inhabit Sardinia have been famous for their vivid and harmonious colorings, but so great has been the inroad of modern business and travel the last ten years that these extremely highly-colored clothes are steadily being replaced by modern European clothes of sober hues. Today the modern clothes are noticeable for their great popularity among the natives.

Editorial

Republican voters of Will County have a serious responsibility before them in the Primary Election next Tuesday in selecting a man to serve the County as its State's Attorney for the next four years.

So overwhelming is the Republican majority in this county that a nomination virtually amounts to a final election. Therefore it is the duty of the voter to give the nomination of State's Attorney the most careful consideration before casting his ballot next Tuesday.

There are two Republican candidates for the nomination for State's Attorney in this primary, James W. Faulkner and Hjalmar Rehn, both of Joliet.

The character and reputation of the two being equal, one must turn to their training and experience in order to render judgment.

Both candidates have practiced law for the same length of time, about 12 years, but Mr. Rehn has had very little experience in the trial of cases. Most of his work has been done in his office and the Probate Court. He is not considered to be a trial lawyer.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BEHIND A MASK

WITH the exception of children, who are just beginning to find their way about through a labyrinth of words of perplexing colorings, meanings and difficulties, the great majority of humans habitually hide the truth behind a carefully adjusted mask.

To our shame, be it said, we take as naturally to exaggeration as a duck

On the other hand Mr. Faulkner has not only done considerable advisory work, but has established a reputation for being one of the best trial lawyers at the Will County Bar.

In the past two years Mr. Faulkner has lost but one case, a small civil matter, out of a score or more tried before juries, not only in this County, but in the Federal Courts of Chicago as well.

He knows civil law and criminal law and is capable of holding his own in either branch against any member of the legal profession in this County.

To be a successful State's Attorney one must know and be familiar with the rules and practice governing criminal cases.

Mr. Rehn has not had the opportunity to familiarize himself with this branch of the law.

Theoretically he knows how to select a jury and proceed in trial of a criminal case but is decidedly lacking in practical experience.

On the other hand Mr. Faulkner has not only defended a number of criminal cases here and in the courts of other counties, but during the war he was in the legal department of the Navy and acted as prosecutor for the government in the vice-clean up of Chicago, later going to Kansas City where he was head of the Navy's legal department for the district comprised of Kansas and parts of Missouri and Oklahoma.

Trial of criminal cases, however, is not the only task of a State's Attorney. He is the legal advisor of the County and County Officers, including the Board of Supervisors.

Mr. Faulkner, possessing as he does a sound, basic knowledge of the law, is qualified to meet these obligations of the office.

In pledging himself to appoint a woman for investigator to take charge of cases involving juveniles and wayward girls that come to the attention of the State's Attorney's office, Mr. Faulkner is building a monument for himself in the hearts of mothers' and fathers' whose children go astray, and should receive the support of every careful-thinking man and woman in the County for that one thing if nothing else.

In voting for Mr. Faulkner the voter will cast a ballot for a man of strong and charming personality, a shrewd, capable and efficient lawyer, and one qualified to assume the burden of responsibility that the office of State's Attorney entails.

And this conceit, which is very difficult to understand in reasoning beings, is responsible for much of our unhappiness.

It is at the best a perilous weakness, sure at some time or another to strip us of our rags of dishonor in the presence of those of our friends whose good opinions we prize and wish to retain.

But under the masks our faces exhibit no concern when this thought

WHAT OTHERS SAY:

The Elmhurst Press of DuPage County says: "Deicke will carry DuPage County five to one. He has no opposition here, and with the support he is getting in the other counties, he should be an easy winner."

The Crete Record of Will County says: "As the Primaries are drawing near it is becoming more and more apparent that Edwin F. Deicke is the most popular candidate for Congress. The fact that he is a Business Man and Farmer, opposed by four lawyers, seems to be very much in Deicke's favor."

The Woodstock American of McHenry County says: "McHenry County will surprise Deicke with the large vote he will get here. He will carry this county by a wide margin. The People of McHenry County want a Business Man and Farmer to represent them in Congress and not Political Lawyers such as are opposing Deicke. Deicke meets our requirements 100 per cent."

The Batavia Herald of Kane County says: "Edwin F. Deicke is a young man of fine abilities, well versed upon the leading topics of the day. He is not a millionaire, a Politician, or a Lawyer, but a Successful Business Man and Farmer and a Progressive Citizen. DuPage County has been supporting Kane and Will County candidates for thirty years. Now let us return the favor and support their candidate. Turn about is fair play. From all indications he will carry Kane County, as he is well known throughout the Fox River Valley."

Thurlow G. Essington's Pledge to the People of Illinois

If nominated at the primaries next Tuesday, April 8th, and elected Governor in November, I pledge myself as follows:

Hard roads belong to the people. They pay for them. No Governor would dare stop building them. Roads are an economic, not a political proposition.

Not a single mile of hard road has been built during Governor Small's administration that was not laid out and provided for during Governor Lowden's administration.

If nominated and elected I will carry out the hard roads program initiated by Governor Lowden. I will see that hard roads are built economically and honestly. I will not use them to reward my friends or as a political bludgeon to punish those who oppose me.

I will oppose any suggestion to return automobile fees to the Counties proportionate to their payment. It cannot be done because these fees are pledged as security for bond issues.

If the $100,000,000 bond issue is approved by the people at the November election I will carry out their will. If it is defeated I will recommend a plan providing for the continuance of road building.

I regard the pardoning power vested in the Governor as a sacred trust. It should not be used to release criminals for political purposes.

I will adhere to the budget system of recommending appropriations and restore it to its former efficiency.

I will reduce the expenses of the State government to the minimum by avoiding useless waste and extravagance. No one shall be on the pay roll who does not work for the State.

ONLY A HURDY-GURDY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MUSIC beneath your window—
Suddenly sweet, a tune!—
Maybe a song recalling,
Song of another June.

"Where is it from, the music?
Look and see, if you can."
"It's only a hurdy-gurdy,
And a hurdy-gurdy man."

Maybe your heart was weary,
Worn in the war of trade,
Weary of fault and failure,
Sick of the wealth you've made;
Now it is all forgotten.

Vote For James W. Faulkner For

State's Attorney of Will County

Consider carefully the candidate you select to fill the important office of State's Attorney. Is he experienced, honest, and able to give to the People of Will County the proper service for the large amount paid to him? What has he done in the legal profession that justifies his claim for experience?

Mr. Faulkner has been a successful practitioner in all branches of the law, civil and criminal, for the past 12 years. His success as a trial lawyer is known to every newspaper reader of Will County, particularly those who have been called into jury service in the years of his practice.

He has been an active Republican for the past 14 years and has taken part in every campaign in the interest of Republican Candidates during that time.

Mr. Faulkner is an ex-service man and a member of the Harwood Post of the American Legion.

These are the three things he promises to the People of Will County:

FIRST: Justice and consideration to all, regardless of nationality, race or creed.

SECOND: A strict enforcement of the law, both state and federal.

THIRD: A woman investigator to assume charge of the juveniles and girls of Will County, Illinois; the salary of this investigator to be paid by him out of his salary as State's Attorney. (The mothers and Women's Clubs of Joliet and Will County have long and earnestly worked for such an appointment.)

Mr. Faulkner will not be dominated by any man or faction; nor will he favor a friend or persecute an enemy; nor will he indulge in unfair tactics nor a denial of what he really is to certain voters in order to cloud the vision of the voters in their selection of a candidate to represent them as State's Attorney.

Mr. Faulkner IS FAIR, ABLE, HONEST AND CONSCIENTIOUS. He has earned the reputation of being a competent lawyer by actual work not inference; and if you will select your candidate for this office as you would your personal attorney you would not look far before concluding that he had the ability to serve you.

IMPORTANT NOTICE:— Mr. Faulkner will broadcast from Station WWAE, Alamo Ballroom, Joliet, Illinois, on Monday evening, April 7th 1924 at 8:30 o'clock. Please hear him. The Elks' Trio and the Fairmount Quartet will also broadcast.
